JESSE M. WALTER DIES AT HIS HOME

Retired Merchant Dies in his Ninetieth Year. Had been Confined to his Bed for Only Ten Days. Formerly Held County Offices.

Jesse M. Walter, one of Gettysburg's oldest residents, died at his home on York street this afternoon at ten minutes after twelve o'clock after an illness of only ten days. He was aged 89 years and 8 months.

Mr. Walter was a retired merchant and his grocery store on York street was for many years one of the best known business places in Gettysburg. He conducted it until October 1910 when he closed it out and had been living retired since then. He was in good health until about ten days ago when he became ill from infirmities, rather than from any special cause, and he gradually sank until the end came this afternoon.

Mr. Walter was born on Christmas Day, 1824, on the farm two miles north of Gettysburg in Straban township now known as the William B. McIlhenny farm. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Walter who moved to Gettysburg in 1851. Mr. Walter continued on the farm for a year after his parents came to town and in 1852 he also came to Gettysburg where he had been living ever since.

For twelve years he was clerk to the county commissioners and then established his grocery store which he conducted for between forty and fifty years. He was a member of Gettysburg Lodge of Odd Fellows for over sixty years.

On February 12, 1864 he married Miss Elizabeth Myers, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Myers, of New Chester, who survives together with one son, their only child, George M. Walter Esq., of Gettysburg. Jesse M. Walter was the last of a family of twelve children.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

The party left Biglerville last Thursday morning and went by way of Columbia and Lancaster to Valley Forge where they attended a reunion of the Ludwig family. Going on to Philadelphia they continued to Camden by means of the ferry and then, on their return through Norristown and Reading, stopped long enough to visit Rev. John Schlosser. ## PLAN CHURCH IMPROVEMENTS

Presbyterians Launch Campaign for Extensive Changes to the Interior of their Church. Will Repaint Immediately. Other Things Later.

Plans were launched Monday evening at a meeting of the congregation of the Presbyterian church for extensive improvements to their building, covering a period of several years, in order to allow for convenient financing of the projects proposed.

The meeting was very well attended and representative of the congregation. It was decided that the exterior of the church should be repainted at once, the color to remain the same as at present. Every precaution will be taken to prevent permanent harm to the well developed vines on the west and south walls. Conveniences will also be installed in the church building.

The more ambitious plans and the ones for which a campaign of finances will be inaugurated will include the installation of new pews, the recarpeting of the church and the entire change in the lighting facilities. The method of receiving the funds for these plans will be so arranged that contributions may be made over a period of several years and, as the returns justify, the improvements will be taken in hand. In this way the action of Monday night practically amounts to the establishment of a sinking fund for the up-keep of the church building.

The pews now in use in the church have been there for over fifty years and, when the building was used as a hospital at the time of the battle, the cots bearing the wounded were laid over the backs of the seats. In one of these pews Lincoln sat while attending service here on the day of the dedication of the Soldiers' National Cemetery, and a tablet was recently placed on the front of the building making note of this fact.

It is known which pew Mr. Lincoln occupied and it, too, is soon to be marked with a brass tablet, the contribution of Mr. J. W. Johnston of Rochester, New York, who sent the wreath and flags to be placed on the grave of John Burns in July. Mr. Johnston wished to show his gratitude to Rev. F. E. Taylor for his participation in the simple services of that occasion and offered to donate the tablet. The donor has a remarkable collection of actual scenes in the battle and will be here for the unveiling of the new tablet when he will give his lecture and show the views.

With the installation of new pews in the building the Lincoln pew will not be removed but will be given a prominent place.

The establishment of a new lighting system and the purchase of a new carpet will mean much in beautifying the interior appearance of the main auditorium which only a few years ago was re-frescoed. Other changes to improve the appearance of this main room are also in contemplation.

From the manner in which the plans were received and acted upon by the congregation at their meeting Monday night it would appear that there will be little difficulty in financing their project and that it will be but a comparatively short time before the principal improvements will be undertaken. It is hoped to have them all completed in two or three years.

Many Cases Quickly Disposed of and Court Takes a Recess until Next Saturday Morning. Criminal Cases. Divorce Suits.

August Court adjourned this morning, after hearing several cases, until Saturday at 10:30 when the prisoners will likely be sentenced.

The cases of assault and battery, and surety of the peace, against John Little were settled.

District Attorney Wible asked and secured a nol pros in each of the following cases, John A. Nail, surety of the peace; Robert McSherry, malicious mischief; Harvey McClellan, assault and battery; David Reese.

Similar disposition was made of a case of larceny against Laura Thomas who was accused of stealing a pocket book with some money, the property of Grace Craig.

Herbert Mathews was discharged with a not guilty verdict in the case which involved the alleged larceny of a dog from George Johnson. It developed that the dog did not bear a license tag, and the owner not entitled to legal recourse in recovering his property.

ANNOUNCE TWO RACING EVENTS

Matinee at Hunterstown on September Fifth and at Gettysburg Two Days Later. Probably Last Driving Event of this Year.

After two successful racing matinees held this summer by the Great Conewago Trotting Association at their track near Hunterstown, they will have another meet on Saturday, September 5th. This, in all probability, will be the last one of the year, although it is possible that the association may be compelled to yield to the demands of the horse owners to have at least one more day's sport before the cold weather comes.

There had been some question about the determination of the date for the coming meet. The last Saturday in August was advocated by some of the committee but, after taking everything into consideration, it was decided that September 5th would be the most advantageous date and that was the day fixed upon.

Ex-Sheriff Edward Peeling, who is at present postmaster of York, and a noted horseman of York county, has consented to act as judge provided nothing intervenes to prevent his attendance on that day.

The following have already announced that they will enter their horses, Roy Raffenberger, Arendtsville; Henry Deardorff, Mummaburg; Charles Cashman, Bowlder; E. Topper, New Baltimore; Calvin Cook, Hampton; C. T. Lerew, Bendersville; Dr. G. H. Seaks, New Oxford; George Taylor, Brysonia; Curtis Peters and Charles Raffenberger, Biglerville; John N. Shultz and Fred McComman, Gettysburg; George Millheims and James Millheims, New Chester; and the following from Hunterstown, John Lehr, Martin Harman, H. G. Deatrick, Robert F. Bell, Earl Guise, Galt Weaver and George Harman.

A joint driving meeting of the Hunterstown association and a number of Gettysburg men, styled the "Road Drivers", is being arranged for Monday, September 7th, which is Labor Day. It is proposed to hold the meet on the track west of town that was constructed by the Gettysburg club several years ago. The track is open at all times and local people are invited to use it.

EXPECTS BELASCO

To See Production of Play in Walter's Theatre.

N. I. Colman, advance representative of the Loie Francis Stock Company which arrived in town on Sunday to spend two weeks here in rehearsals, states that David Belasco will be in Gettysburg one night during their week's engagement here, September 7 to 13. Harry Colman, manager of the company, will arrive here from New York to-night. He says that he has secured the rights of one of Mr. Belasco's latest pieces, that one of Mr. Belasco's own men will direct the rehearsals and that the famous manager will himself come here as a "first nighter". If Mr. Colman is not disappointed Gettysburg will indeed have something new in things theatrical.

LATEST REPORT

The mean price to producers in the three months of heavy marketing, Sept., Oct., and Nov. last year, was 85.5 cents bushel. In 1912 it was 62.3 cents and in 1911 it was 69.7 cents. Pennsylvania will produce 19,500,000 bushels and Delaware 400,000 bushels.

ALLIES ARE DRIVEN BACK INTO FRANCE

Germans Win First Big Battle.

CROSS FRENCH BORDER

Occupy Luneville, Amance and Dieulouard.

3,000,000 MEN ENGAGED

Desperate Fighting Continues All Along the Line.

Paris, Aug. 25.—An official announcement says that Luneville, Amance and Dieulouard, in the Department of Meurthe and Moselle, have been occupied by the Germans.

The French front otherwise has not been modified.

This is the first decisive action in the greatest battle in the world's history.

According to official reports that have been received here from the eighty mile battle line extending from Mons in Belgium to the frontier of Luxembourg, the vast invading army of Teutons continue to move forward and are being engaged by the French and British troops. Everywhere the French are taking the offensive, and the general engagement continues with desperation.

At Neufchateau, in Belgium, the Germans defeated the French troops and now occupy that town, the Gallic forces retreating toward the French frontier.

London, Aug. 25.—It is officially admitted that the allies' forces have been driven back from the French frontier.

"The general engagement continues with desperation," is the wording of an official communication given out this afternoon. "Already both sides have suffered serious losses."

The allies have failed in their first offensive movement against the Germans in Belgium and have been driven back upon the French frontier. This was officially admitted by the official press bureau, when it issued the following statement:

"News has been received that the first line of defense has been taken, notwithstanding the withdrawal of a portion of the allied troops from the line of Sambre to the original position on the French frontier. There is no information regarding British casualties."

This statement from the official bureau has aroused the utmost pessimism in London, as it had been confidently expected that the English and French would be able to withstand the German assault.

The French war office has confirmed the English report that the allies have been forced to retire to the French frontier. While this is tantamount to the declaration of defeat and the greatest pessimism prevails, the war office makes itself clear that no undue concern should be felt.

Defeat for the allies at this time indicates that the offensive movement, which began when the British troops reached Mons, has been terminated and that the original plan of defense must again be adopted.

The war office issued a statement calling attention to the fact that the general plan of the allies was simply to check the German advance and to hold them until the Russians could sweep to Berlin.

The retreat of the allies simply means that the strongly fortified towns will be manned and that the allies will await the German attack instead of precipitating a battle with disastrous results. The Germans are pushing toward France through three valleys—Scheldt, Dender and Sambre. The entrance into France will probably be made south of Mons, and the city of Maubeuge, which is heavily fortified, will be the first touched by the Germans. The right wing will probably attack Lille and Valenciennes while the central army will undoubtedly push forward through the valley of the Meuse at Givet.

Should the reports be true that the army of the Crown Prince has been victorious near Metz, it is probable that an invasion will be made south of Luxembourg, Lunneville, Spincourt and Nanck are now reported to be in the hands of the Germans, but only the first city is admitted lost by the war office.

The great battle between the mass of the German army in Belgium still continues, with the most desperate fighting in progress near Mons, where the British troops are holding their own against the German attack.

An official statement issued by the government press bureau says:

Fought All Day Sunday. The British forces were engaged all Sunday until after dark with the enemy in the neighborhood of Mons.

EMPEROR WILLIAM

German Forces Win First Great Battle.

The British held their ground.

This official statement says nothing about fighting but the French Embassy has issued the following statement:

"According to telegrams just received the forces are in contact all along the line, but neither side has gained any advantage."

A dispatch from Paris says that Minister of War Messimy revealed the plan of campaign adopted by France and England against Germany. It is mainly a campaign of defense, not of offense, except where the offensive can be taken without danger.

The purpose to hold in check the German advancing on France until Russia can sweep through Eastern Germany an capture Berlin.

The situation in Belgium is being anxiously watched by the War Office. It is reported here, but not confirmed that General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, and Field Marshal Sir John French, the British commander, have their headquarters either at Meudon or in the vicinity of that town which is only thirteen miles from Sedan.

The power of the German army, made up of about 800,000 first line soldiers, supported by approximately 1,000,000 reserves, is engaged with a force of about 1,000,000 French and probably 1,000,000 English.

Although the invaders took the offensive, hurling their colossal host in three columns against the Franco-British lines, the French and English troops are believed now to be on the aggressive.

According to dispatches from Ostend, one German column marched southward toward Valenciennes by way of Ninove and Grammont, another proceeded by way of Ninove and Lessines, and the third pushed toward Braine-le-Comte and Mons.

From the time the conflict began early Saturday and throughout the day Sunday the roar of artillery and the evolutions of heavy bodies of horses and infantry have been continuous.

The Germans advanced at great speed and so ponderous was the force of the invaders that their first blow at the ranks of the defenders was like the rush of a human tidal wave.

The lie of battle is not in regular formation, but extends along the valleys of the Sambre, Scheldt and Denders, through tracks of meadow land and thick belts of forest. Part of the battle zone is so thickly wooded especially that part along the right wing of the French army, that artillery fire is difficult and ineffectual.

CZAR FREES POLES

Russian Poland is Granted Complete Independence.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Information was received by the Polish Daily Zgoda from Poles in Europe that Czar Nicholas has granted complete independence to Russian Poland, withdrawing all Russian civil and military authorities and permitting the establishment of a Polish government.

"Our information is that a Polish government has been established at Warsaw," said Louis Lesnick, editor of the Zgoda. "The Czar promised that if the Russian Poles stood by the empire in the war with Germany and Austria independence would be granted. Nicholas has lived up to the promise he gave, according to our information and the liberty has been granted to us."

TWO DIE IN AUTO CRASH

Machine Leaps Over Bank and Takes Fire.

CHAUFFEUR IS NOT HURT

Car Hits Obstruction on Road Near Reading, Pa., and Turned Turtle, Pining Victims Beneath It.

Reading, Aug. 25.—Two men were killed and another was injured when an automobile in which they were driving was ditched a short distance from Bernhart's reservoir, on the road to this city, turning turtle and taking fire upon the explosion of the gasoline tank.

Both died in St. Joseph's hospital in Reading, Pa.

Fred M. Gift, 1047 Locust street, is badly burned about the hand and arm. George Kline, of Hyde Park, a Pennsylvania railroad carpenter, owner and driver of the car, was practically uninjured.

The account of the accident as given by the participants, is that as they were speeding to the city after a stay at the bungalow of the Marion Fire Company, in Muhlenberg township, the light car struck an obstruction. Heavily loaded as it was, it was impossible to avoid swerving to the side. The car toppled to the brink of the embankment turned over and went hurtling down.

Kline was thrown practically clear. Gift had his arms caught under the car, but these were soon extricated. Weiler and Homan were caught beneath the body of the car and pinned there helpless.

Coincident with the upset, the gas tank exploded, enveloping the machine in flames. Underneath this with their clothes drenched with the deadly inflammable gasoline that soon became ignited the two men writhed in agony.

Al Berlinger manager of the Reading basketball team, who was motoring a short distance away, hearing the cries for assistance responded. They jacked up the heavy metal car and withdrew Weiler and Homan, both unconscious.

AUSTRIANS BEATEN AT LOSNITZA

Servians Literally Cut Three Regiments to Pieces.

Paris, Aug. 25.—"The situation involving Austria and Italy is acute. We are hoping for the best, for Italy wants to avoid war, but no man can tell what will happen."

Marquis San Giuliano, the Italian Foreign Minister, was quoted in dispatches as having made the foregoing remarks to a diplomat who is his close friend. Nothing more is necessary to show that Italy expects war.

Reports that Austria has withdrawn from Germany the troops she sent to help the kaiser and has sent them to the Italian frontier have served to heighten the tension. Though a censorship has been operating here for some time it is much more rigorous.

There are indications of acute diplomatic tension between Vienna and Rome, according to the correspondent of the Petit Parisien, in the latter city. Austria it is declared, has reproached Italy for according facilities to the allied fleets in the Adriatic, and it is possible that a declaration of war between Italy and Austria will be announced early next week.

FAVOR MCREYNOLDS

Former Papal Secretary Said to Support American Citizen for Office.

Rome, Aug. 25.—It was learned from the highest authority that Cardinal Merry Del Val, who resigned as papal secretary of state upon the death of Pope Pius X, will support Cardinal Diomede Falconio as successor to the late Pontiff.

Cardinal Falconio is a naturalized American citizen, although an Italian by birth.

Extraordinary conditions brought about by the European war are increasing the difficulty of hitting upon the identity of the next Pope, but there were evidences that the candidature of Cardinal Dominic Ferrata is gaining strength.

In addition to the exigencies of the occasion from an international standpoint, there are factions among the Cardinals in Rome, which grew up during the reign of Pope Pius X, and the next occupant of the chair of St. Peter will have to be able to smooth these over.

Cardinal Ferrata was born in 1847, and was elevated to the cardinalate in 1896. He is secretary of the Congregation of the Holy Office.

KING VICTOR EMMANUEL

ITALY IS ON THE BRINK OF WAR

"No Man Can Tell What Will Happen," Says Minister.

Milan, Aug. 25.—Regarding the great rout of the Austro-Hungary army at the battle of Losnitza in which 300,000 combatants participated the "Rome Tribuna" has received confirmation of the Servian version from private sources of trustworthy nature. Three regiments of the Austro-Hungarian army were, in fact, literally cut to pieces at the confluence of the Rivers Drina and Save.

The Servians lured the army into a glade among the mountains, and, rushing from their hiding places on the heights, surrounded the infantry and annihilated them.

Seventeen Austrian craft have been sunk by the Servian artillery. The Austrian forces were composed of nine divisions and numbered nearly 200,000 men. The Servians were much inferior in numbers, but showed greater heroism. Their handling of their artillery, their superior marching and endurance, their discipline, and the accuracy of their fire insured them the victory.

Servia has issued a reply to the official communication on the Austrian Servian situation issued in Vienna. After repeating the main point of the Austrian note the Servian communication said:

"In order to put matters in their proper light the official press bureau has been authorized by the highest authorities to issue the following:

"The Servian army captured from the enemy in the engagement on the Drina spoils which up to the present time include the following items: Four thousand five hundred prisoners, fifty-three guns, eight Howitzers, one hundred and fourteen caissons, three field ambulances and a medical column with supplies, fourteen field kit-ephens, fifteen ammunition, provision and telegraph wagons, railroad trains, quantities of equipment, regimental strong boxes, etc."

Reports received at Udine, Italy, from Vienna are to the effect that the Austrians are about to abandon their operations against the Servians on the Drina river in order to concentrate their forces against the Russian advance. The difficulties of the campaign against Servia have been redoubled by the troubles in Bosnia.

Austrian Fleet off to Fight

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear husband, George D. Rosensteel, who departed this life February 25th, 1914.

Oh, how hard we tried to save him, But our cares were all in vain, Oh, the misery of that dreary morn, When we stood around his bed Till death stole upon him softly and we knew his soul had fled.

The last farewell was spoken six months ago to-day, Our family circle was broken when my husband passed away.

So prepare my friends to mourn and weep, While in the dust I sweetly sleep, And when my grave-you come to see, Prepare yourself to follow me.

Prepare in time, make no delay, For I was quickly called away.

By his wife and children, Mrs. Margaret Rosensteel.

HOW A NEW POPE IS SELECTED AT CARDINALS' SECRET CONCLAVE

Public Is Admitted During First Day—Door Seldom Opened Thereafter. Prelates Locked Up Until Choice Is Made—Methods of Balloting.

THE procedure attending the choice of a new pope is full of interest. There was a time when the election of the supreme head of the church was vested in the cardinal bishop, "with the consent of the other cardinals and clergy and people of Rome, saving also the honor due to the king of the Romans." But this recognition of a kingly and imperial right to interfere with the papal elections was the cause of endless troubles. It proved to be a fertile source of anti-popes and other vexations, and finally became so intolerable that Alexander III. took away from the imperial line the locus standi in papal elections, and a general council later on, held at the Lateran, decreed the election should henceforth rest "with the cardinals alone." This Lateran decree was confirmed and developed at the council at Lyons, presided over by Pope Gregory X., and in all substantial features the discipline then laid down still obtains in all papal elections.

The immediate body or convention which chooses the head of the church is called a conclave. The building or hall in which such convention is held is also designated by the same name—conclave. The election of a pope must begin ten days after the death of the last incumbent. It is provided that the election shall neither be delayed nor precipitated, that the electors should be in no fear for their personal safety and that they must not be subjected to any external persuasion in casting their vote. Immediately upon the death of a pope one of the secretaries of the sacred college notifies each cardinal of the pontiff's demise and summons him to the city in which the pope breathed his last. The election must take place in the same city where the death occurs. Within ten days the conclave must be constituted in the Vatican at Rome, or some other suitable building if it be held in another city.

Holding the Conclave.

On the tenth day solemn mass is said, at the conclusion of which the cardinals form in procession and march to the conclave. The conclave is open to the public during the whole of the first day, and friends of the electors are permitted to visit them. At 9 o'clock that evening the conclave is closed; everybody is turned out except the cardinals and their immediate attendants, and no visitors are allowed to enter the portals again until the election of a pope has been declared. The conclave is under the absolute charge of two guardians. One of these is a prelate of high standing, previously selected by the sacred college, and is called the governor. The other is a prominent layman whose official appellation is marshal. Each cardinal is allowed to have two members of his resident household in personal attendance upon him. A number of other attendants and minor officials are also there in the common service of the conclave, including a sacrist, a monk or friar, to hear confessions, two or three barbers, eight or ten porters and a number of messengers. But one entrance to the building is allowed to remain open, and that is in charge of prelate officials. They must exercise a strict surveillance over everybody going in or out and prevent the entrance of unauthorized persons. They must also examine the food brought for the cardinals, for the purpose of preventing outside communication with them through this channel.

Three days after the commencement of the conclave, if no result has been obtained, the supply of food is restricted. The rule used to prevail that if at the end of five days no election had been made the cardinals were compelled to subsist upon bread, wine and water. But during the last half century the rigor of this rule has been much relaxed and modified. Every morning and evening the cardinals meet in the chapel, and a secret scrutiny by means of voting papers is instituted, so as to ascertain if any candidate has obtained the required majority of two-thirds.

After the Pope's Death.

For the three days following the interment of the pontiff the cardinals meet in the hall of the consistory and receive the condolences of the ambassadors of the various governments which have representatives at Rome.

This official ceremony at an end preparations are made to elect a new pope and the meeting of the cardinals, officially known as a conclave, is called. The word conclave is especially fitting to designate the meeting. It comes from the word clavis, meaning key, and at the meeting the cardinals are actually under lock and key. This custom of locking up the cardinals until a choice is made can be traced back to the thirteenth century.

At the inaugural of the conclave the cardinals form in line in order of rank and march to St. Peter's, where the mass of the Holy Spirit is sung and they listen to a sermon, the pro eligendo pontifice.

Attendants on the Cardinals.

The master of ceremonies then takes the papal cross and the cardinals form in a body behind him, with their personal attendants following. Each cardinal may have two attendants. The pontiff's choir then chants the "Veni, Creator Spiritus."

Next follows the reading of the apostolic constitution by the dean of the cardinals. Practically everything is now in readiness for the cardinals to proceed with the actual election, but in order that they have time to meditate on the meaning of the constitution an adjournment is taken until afternoon.

At this time they meet and receive the oaths of the attendants and officers of the election. After this preliminary there is more time for meditation and individual prayer.

In the evening, as has been said, the conclave is closed to all but the cardinals, and the attendants and officers leave the palace. The last door is locked and the keys turned over to the chamberlain. The governor and the marshal, two officers appointed among the palace officials, then guard the door. Sentinels are also stationed in every room adjoining the chamber to see that there is no communication.

Except to announce that a new pope has been chosen, this door may be opened only in the event of the sickness of one of the cardinals.

Within the palace the cardinals spend the night in silence and prayer and meditation preparatory to the real business of the election the next day.

Methods of Election.

There are three ways in which a new pontiff may be elected without balloting—by acclamation, inspiration and adoration. Gregory VII. was elected by acclamation, but cases in which a pontiff has been chosen other than by balloting have been rare.

The balloting is secret, and the ballots which are used are elaborate affairs. They are three part ballots. On one fold are the name of the cardinal, his title and his seals. On another fold is a number, and under this each cardinal places a motto, known only to himself, in order to identify his ballot after it is voted.

Then he says aloud the electoral oath: "I bear witness, Christ the Lord, who I judge before God should be chosen, and I will do the same on the accession."

With these words each cardinal drops his ballot in the chalice, salutes the cross and returns to his place.

Two-thirds Vote Needed.

It takes a two-thirds majority to elect any one, and generally no one is eligible but a member of the college of cardinals. This is laid down by custom rather than by law, however. If no one has the necessary majority the voting must be continued.

Patience Worth Cultivating.

Whoever is out of patience is out of possession of his soul. Men must not turn bees and kill themselves in stinging others.—Bacon.

If a cardinal wishes to change his first vote he writes on his second ballot, "Accedo Rev. D. meo ego Card." If he wishes to stand by his first choice he writes on his second ballot, "Nemini," meaning nobody. No cardinal may vote for himself, and if it were found that one had been elected who had voted for himself, no matter how great a majority he might have, his election would be void.

Some one having received the necessary votes, the dean of the cardinals goes to the pope elect and says: "Do you accept the election canonically made to the supreme pontificate?"

Upon the pope elect signifying that he does, his cardinal's robes are taken off and a papal gown placed on him; then he takes his seat in a great chair before the altar, and the chamberlain places the fisherman's ring on his finger. The cardinals then make their first obeisance to the new pope, kissing his foot and hand and receiving from him the "kiss of peace." He announces the name by which he wishes to be known.

Announcing a New Pope. Preceded by the pontifical choir chanting "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus," the senior cardinal goes to the balcony of the palace and to the waiting populace below announces:

I announce to you a great joy. We have as pope the most eminent and most revered cardinal of the holy Roman church, who has taken the name of —.

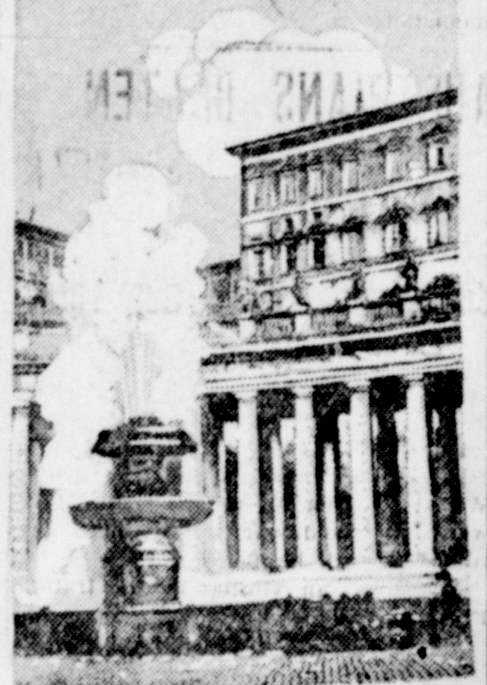

While great crowds surround the palace waiting for this announcement, the fact that a new pope has been chosen is always known some time before this, because when the deciding vote is cast the ballots are placed in a little stove kept for that purpose and burned. The crowds see the smoke arise and know that a new pontiff has been elected.

The sacred college, which will choose a successor to Pope Pius, consists of sixty-five cardinals, of whom thirty-three are Italians and thirty-two of other nations. Normally the college consists of seventy cardinals, but there were five vacancies at the time Pope Pius died.

Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore is the senior American member of the sacred college in point of service. He was made a cardinal June 7, 1885.

When a Pope Dies.

As soon as a pope breathes his last the cardinal chamberlain takes possession of the apostolic palace. He proceeds to the death chamber, assures himself of, and instructs a notary to certify to the fact that the pope is really dead. Then the ring of the fisherman is broken and the seal destroyed. The body is embalmed and carried in procession to the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament in the Vatican basilica, where it remains for three days, the feet protruding a little through an opening in the iron railing which incloses the chapel, that the faithful may approach and kiss the embrowned slipper. The nine days of funeral services are gone through with.

During the last three days the services are performed about an elevated and magnificent catafalque. On each of these days five cardinals in turn give the absolution, and on the ninth day a funeral oration is pronounced. The body is recently put into a cypress wood coffin. This is put into a leaden case, properly inscribed, and then all is placed in a wooden box covered with a red pall, and in this condition it is carried to the last resting place, previously selected by the deceased.

On the tenth day the cardinals assemble in the forenoon, and the preparations are made for the conclave.

Francesco Cardinal Della Volpe, the present cardinal chamberlain, was born at Ravenna, Italy, Dec. 24, 1844. He was appointed a cardinal June 19, 1899, and cardinal chamberlain last May.

LEARN LESSON OF SECRECY.

Nations in This War Following the Example Set by Japan.

While Japan has borrowed most of her military science from Europe, she taught the west, in return, the enormous value of secrecy in warfare. All the powers engaged in the European death grapple have learned that lesson.

The censorship which has been drawn around Europe's war zone is chiefly responsible for the success of this secrecy. No telegram, private or for the newspapers, goes out of any belligerent country without passing under the eye of a censor.

British newspapers discuss the war more freely than do the continental papers, but under the imperative request of the war office they say nothing of the movements of troops or ships. German newspapers, according to reports, print only official news.

THE SUPPER TABLE.

SUPPER MENU.

Ham Quenelle.
Tomato Croquettes.
Watercress.
Tea Biscuit.
Lemon Souffle.
Cocoa or Chocolate.

NO matter what may be its deficiencies, a supper table supplied with good tea biscuit and butter is accorded indulgence. The supper recipes suggested are good ones:

Brown In Quick Oven.

Tea Biscuit.—Mix together one quart of flour, one teaspoonful each of salt and sugar and one-half teaspoonful of baking powder. Then rub in two table-spoonsful of shortening. When well mixed rub through a coarse sieve. Add one cupful and a half of fine, stale breadcrumbs. Into two cupfuls and a half of thick, sour milk sift one almost rounding teaspoonful of soda and stir quickly into the dry mixture, using only enough of the milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on a floured board, knead lightly for a moment, then roll out one inch thick. Cut in small rounds, place in a greased pan, brush the tops with milk and brown in a quick oven.

With Cream Sauce.

Ham Quenelle.—Mince fine cold boiled ham to make one and a half cupfuls and mix with one and a half cupfuls of potatoes, sliced thin. Arrange the ham and potatoes in alternate layers, seasoning the ham with a dash of pepper. When all the ham and potatoes are in the dish, pour in slowly a pint of cream sauce to which have been added two beaten eggs. Let the sauce mix thoroughly with the ham and potato. Then cover the surface with buttered breadcrumbs and place in an oven for fifteen minutes to brown. Serve hot.

Fry In Hot Fat.

Tomato Croquettes.—Cook together for twenty minutes a pint or a half can of tomatoes, one tablespoonful of chopped onion, one sprig of parsley, half a bay leaf, three cloves, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne; then rub through a sieve. Melt three table-spoonsful of butter, blend in five table-spoonsful of flour, add the strained tomato and stir and cook for ten minutes. When cold, shape the mixture into croquettes, dip in beaten egg, roll in fine crumbs, let stand one or more hours and fry in deep hot fat.

Baked Golden Brown.

Lemon Souffle.—Take yolks of four eggs, grated rind and juice of one lemon, one cupful of sugar, whites of four eggs. Beat the yolks until thick and lemon colored, add the sugar gradually and continue beating, then add the lemon rind and the juice. Cut and fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until dry, turn into a buttered pudding dish, set in a pan of hot water and bake thirty-five or forty minutes. Serve with or without sauce.

ENGINES CRASH ON MOUNTAIN

Western Maryland Engines Run together Near Edgemont. Order to Meet Disregarded and Four are Injured in the Accident.

Four trainmen were injured when light engines Nos. 958 and 321 crashed together on the main line of the Western Maryland, about three quarters of a mile west of Edgemont, Monday night shortly after 5:30 o'clock.

Engine No. 321, with a caboose attached was going west, with orders to meet engine No. 958 at Edgemont. Engine 321 was in charge of Engineer Smith, Conductor Taylor and Fireman Mannihan, of Hagerstown and Fireman Bowers, of Hanover. The latter engineer had orders at Highfield to meet 321 at Edgemont. The orders were overlooked and No. 958 proceeded past Edgemont and met No. 321.

Both engines were badly damaged. The rear of No. 958, the one backing from Edgemont down the mountain, was mashed in and the entire crew of this one jumped, before the two struck. The cow catcher and the entire front of 321 was mashed. The caboose, which was attached to 321 was telescoped over the engine and damaged the rear of 321 badly.

Conductor Taylor, of Hagerstown, was probably the most seriously injured. He was hurt about the stomach and had a cut on his head, and suffered considerable from the shock. He was removed to the Washington County Hospital where he will probably be for several weeks.

Fireman Morris, of 958, who leaped just as the engines crashed together, was injured about the hip and stomach. The physicians have been unable to determine whether or not his leg is broken. He was removed to his home in Hagerstown.

The others, who also jumped, were only slightly bruised and were able to walk from the scene of the accident to Edgemont.

The wrecking crew from Hagerstown was soon on the scene and the wreckage was immediately cleared away and both engines removed.

Winnie arrives before they do and walks into the trap prepared for her by Umballa. Winnie is crowned queen. Kathlyn and her father attend in disguise and make their presence known to the court.

CHAPTER XVII—Kathlyn, in disguise, gains admission to Winnie's room, but is discovered by Umballa, who orders that she be offered as a sacrifice to the god Juggernaut. She is rescued by the colonel and his friends.

CHAPTER XVIII—Kathlyn, disguised as an animal trainer, takes part in a public exhibition, concealing her identity to the people and rescues her sister.

He stood by the door, silently contemplating her. "What a certain dungeon holds!" still eddied through the current of his thoughts. Money, money! He needed it; it was the only barrier between him and the end, which at last he began to see. Money, baskets and bags of it, and he dared not go near. May the fires of hell burn eternally in the bones of these greedy soldiers, his only hope!

His body ached; liquid fire seemed to have taken the place of blood in his veins. His back and shoulders were a mass of bruises. Beaten with a gun butt, driven, harried, cursed—he, Durga Ram! A gun butt in the hands of a low caste! He had not only been beaten; he had been dishonored and defiled. His eyes flashed and his fingers closed convulsively, but he was sober. To take yonder white throat in his hands! It was true; he dared not harm a hair of her head!

"Your sister Kathlyn perished under the wheels of the car of Juggernaut."

Winnie did not stir. The aspect of the man fascinated her as the nearness of a cobra would have done. Vipers not only crawled in this terrible land; they walked. One stung with fangs and the other with words. "She is dead, and tomorrow your father dies."

The disheveled appearance of the man did not in her eyes confirm this. Indeed, the longer she gazed at him the more strongly convinced she became that he was lying. But wisely she maintained her silence.

"Dead," he repeated. "Within a week you shall be my wife. You know. They have told you. I want money, and by all the gods of Hind, yours shall be the hand to give it to me. Marry me, and one week after I will give you the means of leaving Allah. Will you marry me?"

"Yes." The word slipped over Winnie's lips faintly. She recalled Ahmed's advice; to humor the man, to play for time; but she knew that if he touched her she must scream.

"Keep that word. Your father and sister are fools."

Winnie trembled. They were alive, Kit and her father; this man had lied. Alive! O, she would not be afraid of any ordeal now. They were alive, and more than that, they were free.

"I will keep my word when the time comes," she replied clearly.

"They are calling me Durga Ram the Mad. Beware, then, for madmen do mad things."

The door opened and shut behind him, and she heard the key turn and the outside bolt click into its socket. They were alive and free, her loved ones! She knelt upon the cushions, her eyes uplifted.

Alone, with a torch in his shaking hand, Umballa went down into the prison, to the row of dungeons. In the one of one was a sliding panel. It pulled this back and peered within. Something lay hidden in a corner. He drew the panel back into its place, climbed the worn steps, extinguished the torch, and proceeded to his own home, a gift of his former master, standing just outside the royal confines. Once there, he had slaves anoint his bruised back and shoulders with unguents, ordered his peg, drank it, and lay down to sleep.

On the morning he was somewhat daunted upon meeting Ramabai in the corridor leading to the throne room, where Winnie and the Council were gathered. He started to summon the guards, but the impassive face of his enemy and the menacing hand stayed the call.

"You are a brave man, Ramabai, to enter the lion's den in this fashion. You shall never leave here alive."

"Yes, Durga Ram. I shall depart as I came, a free man."

"You talk like that to me?" furiously.

"Even so. Shall I go out on the balcony and declare that I know what a certain dungeon holds?"

Umballa's fury vanished, and sweat oozed from his palms.

"You?"

"Yes, I know. A true! The people are muttering and murmuring against you because they were forbidden to attend your especial Juggernaut. Best for both of us that they be quieted and amused."

"Ramabai, you shall never wear the crown."

"I do not want it."

"Nor shall your wife."

Ramabai did not speak.

"You shall die first!"

"War or peace?" asked Ramabai.

"War!"

"So be it. I shall proceed to strike the first blow."

Ramabai turned and began to walk toward the window opening out upon the balcony. Umballa bounded after him, realizing that Ramabai would do as he threatened, declare from the balcony what he knew.

"Wait! A truce for 48 hours."

"Agreed. I have a proposition to make before you and the Council. Let us go in."

Before the Council (startled as had Umballa been at Ramabai's appearance) he explained his plan for the pacification and amusement of the people. Umballa tried to find flaws in it, but his brain, befuddled by numerous woes and disappointments, saw nothing. And when Ramabai produced his troupe of wild animal trainers not even Winnie recognized them. But during the argument between Umballa and the Council as to the date of the festivities Kathlyn raised the corner of her veil. It was enough for Winnie. In the last few days she had learned self-control; and there was scarcely a sign that she saw Kit and her father, and they had the courage to come here in their efforts to rescue her!

It was finally arranged to give the exhibition the next day, and messengers were dispatched forthwith to notify the city and the bazaars. A dozen times Umballa eyed Ramabai's back, murder in his mind and fear in his heart. Blind fool that he had been not to have seen this man in his true light and killed him. Now, if he hired assassins, he could not trust them; his purse was again empty.

Ramabai must have felt the gaze, for once he turned and caught the eye of Umballa, approached and whispered:

"I am being pulled by two horses," he said.

"Act quickly," advised Ahmed; "one way or the other. Umballa will throw his men round the whole city and there will not be a space large enough for a rat to crawl through. And he will fight like a rat this time; mark me."

Ramabai paused suddenly in front of his wife and smiled down at her.

"Pundita, you are my legal queen. It is for you to say what shall be done. I had in mind a republic."

Lal Singh cackled ironically.

"Do not dream," said Ahmed. "Common sense should tell you that there can be no republic in Allah. There must be an absolute ruler, nothing less. Your majesty, speak," he added, saluting before Pundita.

She looked wildly about the room, vainly striving to read the faces of her white friends; but their expressions were like stone images. No help there, no guidance.

"Is the life of a decrepit old man," asked Lal Singh, "worth the lives of the white people who love and respect you?"

Pundita rose and placed her hands upon her husband's shoulders.

"We owe them our lives. Strike, Ramabai; but only if our need demands it."

"Good," said Lal Singh. "I'm off for the bazaars for the night. I will buy chupatties and pass them about, as they did in my father's time at Delhi in the great mutiny."

And he vanished.

Have you ever witnessed the swarming of bees? Have you ever heard the hum and buzz of them? So looked and sounded the bazaars that night. At every intersection of streets and passages there were groups, buzzing and gesticulating. In the gutters the coconut oil lamps flickered, throwing weird shadows upon the walls, and squatting about the lamps the fruit sellers and candy sellers and cobblers and tailors jabbered and droned. Light women, with painted faces, went abroad boldly.

And there was but one word on all these tongues: Magic!

Could any human being pass through what this white woman had? No! She was the reincarnation of some forgotten goddess. They knew that, and Umballa would soon bring famine and plague and death among them. Whenever they uttered his name they spat to cleanse their mouths of the defilement.

For the present the soldiers were his, and groups of them swaggered through the bazaars, chanting drunkenly and making speech with the light women and jostling honest men into the gutters.

All these things Lal Singh saw and heard and made note of as he went from house to house among the chosen and told them to hold themselves in readiness, as the hour was near at hand. Followed the clicking of gunlocks and the rattle of cartridges. A thousand fierce youths ready for anything—death, or loot, or the beauties of the zenanas. For patriotism in southern Asia depends largely upon what treasures one may wring from it.

But how would they know the hour of the uprising? A servant would was advised to have no fear of the lions in the arena, to be ready to join Kathlyn in the arena when she signified the moment. Winnie would have entered a den of tigers had Kathlyn so advised her!

Matters came to pass as Ramabai had planned: the night work in the arena, the clearing of the tunnel, the making of the trap, the perfecting of all the details of escape. Ahmed would be given charge of the exit, Lal Singh of the road, and Ali (Bruce's man) would arrange that outside the city there should be no barriers. All because Ramabai thought more of his conscience than of his ambitions for Pundita.

And when, late in the afternoon, the exhibition was over, Kathlyn stepped upon the trap, threw aside her veil, and revealed herself to the spectators. For all her darkened skin they recognized her, and a deep murmur ran round the arena. Kathlyn, knowing how volatile the people were, extended her hands toward the royal box. When the murmurs died away she spoke in Hindustani:

"I will face the arena lions!"

The murmurs rose again, gaining each volume that they became roars, which the disturbed beasts took up and augmented.

Again Kathlyn made a sign for silence, and added: "Provided my sister stands at my side!"

To this Umballa said no. The multitudes uttered defiance. In the arena they were masters, even as the populace in the old days of Rome were masters of their emperors.

Winnie, comprehending that this was her cue, stepped forward in the box and signified by gestures that she would join her sister.

The roaring began again, but this time it had the quality of cheers. A real spectacle! To face the savage African lions unarmed! A fine spectacle!

Winnie was lowered from the box, and as her feet touched the ground she ran quickly to Kathlyn's side.

"Winnie, I am standing on a trap. When it sinks be not alarmed."

"My Kit!" cried Winnie, squeezing her adored sister's hand.

The arena was cleared, and the doors to the lions' dens were opened. The great maned African lion stood for a moment blinking in the sunshine. One of them roared out his displeasure, and saw the two women. Then all of them loped toward what they supposed were to be their victims.

That night in the bazaars they said that Umballa was warring in the face of the gods. The erstwhile white queen of the yellow hair was truly a great magician. For did she not cause the earth to open up and swallow her sister and herself?

The Uprising.

Through the tunnel, into the street, into the care of Ahmed and Lal Singh, then hurriedly to the house of Ramabai. The fact that they had to proceed to Ramabai's was a severe blow to Bruce and the colonel. They had expected all to be mounted the instant they came from the tunnel, a swift, unobstructed flight to the gate and freedom. But Ahmed could not find his elephants. Too late he learned that the mahouts he had secretly engaged had misunderstood his instructions and had stationed themselves near the main entrance to the arena!

The cursing and railing against fate is a futile thing, never bearing fruit; so Ramabai suggested his house till transportation could be secured. They perfectly understood that they could not remain in the house more than a few hours, for Umballa would surely send his men everywhere, and quite possibly first of all to Ramabai's.

Still Ramabai did not appear very much alarmed. There were secret stairways in his house that not even Pundita knew, and at a pinch he had a plan by which he could turn away investigation. Only in the direst need, though, did he intend to execute the plan. He wanted his friends out of Allah without the shedding of any blood.

"Well," said Ahmed, angrily casting aside his disguise, "well, Ramabai, this is the crisis. Will you strike?"

Lal Singh's wrinkled face lightened up with eagerness.

"We are ready, Ramabai," he said.

"We?" Ramabai paused in his pacing to gaze keenly into the eyes of the old conspirator.

"Yes, we. For I, Lal Singh, propose to take my stand at your right hand. I have not been idle. Everywhere your friends are evincing impatience. Ah, I know. You wish for a bloodless rebellion; but that cannot be, not among our people. You have said that in their zeal your followers, if they knew, would sweep the poor old king out of your path. Listen. Shall we put him back on the throne, to perform some other mad thing like this gift of his throne to the Colonel Sahib?"

Ramabai, watched intently by the two conspirators for the British raj and his white friends, paced back and forth, his hands behind his back, his head bent. He was a Christian, he was not only a Christian, he was a Hindu, and the shedding of blood was

JAPAN OPENS WAR ON GERMANY

Battleship Bombards Forts at Tsing-Tau, China.

KAISER'S SUBJECTS FLEE

The Japanese War Office Expects That the Forces of the Mikado Will Have Little Trouble in Reducing the German Forts.

Tokio, Aug. 24.—The Japanese battleship Settsu opened the bombardment of the German stronghold, Tsing-Tau, 12.16 P. M., Sunday, according to reliable information secured from Shanghai. In the attacking Japanese squadron are also said to have been the battleships Aki, Satsuma and Kashima, together with a number of other vessels.

The Amakus is reported to have mined the entrance to the harbor on Saturday night.

The Settsu has a displacement of 20,800 tons and a powerful armament, including twelve 12-inch guns. The Aki, Satsuma and Kashima are all formidable vessels, though less powerful than the Settsu. The Amakus is a mine layer that was captured from the Russians at Port Arthur in 1905.

It is believed Japan will land a heavy force of infantry and artillery upon the peninsula of Shantung to attack the German forts from behind.

Confidence is expressed that the hostilities will be confined to a small strip of territory lying east of the Yellow river in China and the small section of coast lying on the Bay of Kiaochow.

Vice-Admiral Robouro Vashiro, the minister of marine, and Lieutenant General Ichinosuke Oka, the minister of war, went to the palace and held a long conference with the emperor and gave him assurance it is said that Japan would have little difficulty in reducing the German works on the Chinese coast.

As the German commander at Tsing-Tau received orders from Emperor William to fight to the last, it is assumed that the cannonade of the Japanese warships is being answered by the heavy guns of the fort.

The Diet has been convoked in special session on September 3, when a war loan probably will be voted.

The Japanese government is reported to be short of money, but the universal impression is that the single campaign against the German forces in Kiaochow will not require a heavy outlay.

Wherever Japanese influence is strong German residents are being expelled. German residents of Mukden and Port Arthur are fleeing.

Merchant ships on the southeastern coast of Manchuria and Korea are crowded with refugees. German property is being seized, and it is expected that the Japanese will occupy the German railway in Shantung.

Count Okuma, the premier, has requested the Japanese people to be especially considerate of German residents. Japan has no hatred against these Germans, whose lives and property are protected by law.

An imperial ordinance gave German merchantmen until September 5 to discharge their cargoes and go away safely under the protection of passports.

FAVOR FALCONI FOR POPE

Senate Committee Approves Nomination to Supreme Court.

Washington, Aug. 25.—The senate committee on judiciary reported favorably the nomination of James C. McReynolds to be associate justice of the Supreme Court and Thomas Watts Gregory, of Texas, to be attorney general.

The two names were reported to the senate by Senator Culberson, chairman of the judiciary committee, but they were not called up for consideration and will go over under the rules.

A formidable opposition developed to the favorable report of Mr. McReynolds at this time in the committee on judiciary. Senator Cummins, of Iowa, led the opposition. It was not directed at Mr. McReynolds personally, but the point was made by Senator Cummins that Mr. McReynolds as attorney general had approved of the removal of United States Attorney Wilkinson for the northern district of Illinois before his term had expired, and when a number of important cases were pending, and had sanctioned the application of Charles H. Cline, of Aurora, Ill., an inexperienced man, to the office.

GIRL ARTIST SLAIN: JAP HELD

Body is Found in Sand; Photographer is Charged With Murder.

San Francisco, Aug. 25.—Buried in the sand a mile from her former home at Carmel-by-the-Sea, the body of Helena Wood Smith, a young artist who disappeared two weeks ago, has been found by a searching party. Death had been caused by strangulation.

George Kodoni, a Japanese artist-photographer, who had been arrested at Salinas, told Sheriff Nesbitt that Miss Smith fell over a cliff bordering Carmel beach after they had quarreled. When he saw the body fall, Kodoni said he became alarmed and fled, remaining in hiding until arrested. Before admitting these facts, however, the Japanese maintained that he had not seen or heard of the missing girl since he left her at her bungalow on August 2.

The body was found by a party of the young woman's friends, headed by Frederick R. Benchboldt, a novelist. A piece of heavy cord was tightly drawn around the neck and a sweater had been wrapped around the head.

GRAIN EXPORTS AND WAR.

Months Will Be Required to Ship Our Surplus of Grain.

Just as soon as bottoms can be chartered exports of grain and of other products will be resumed from the United States. England and France should be able to keep open their ports and prevent seizures of food laden ships from this side. However, food is contraband of war, and even if conveyed in bottoms having the registry of neutral nations—Norway, Sweden, Japan or the United States—may be captured by German war vessels if consigned to England or France.

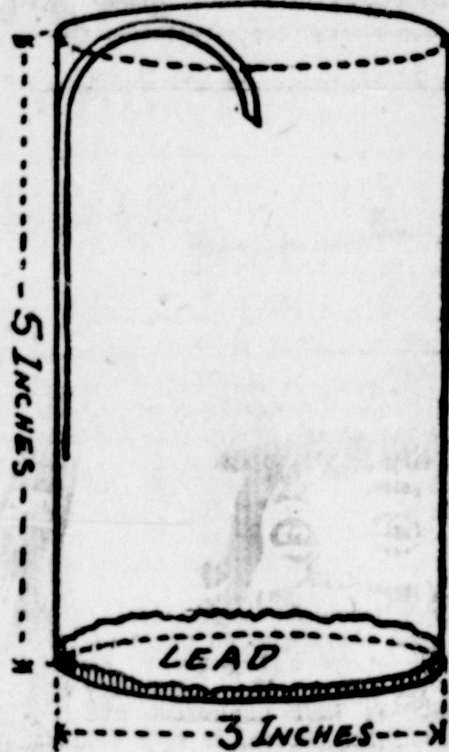

The need of food in Great Britain will soon be desperate. Her stocks on Aug. 1 were hardly enough to feed her population for three months under peace or barely two months under war conditions.

All exports of food from Russia may be prohibited by ukase or embargo, at least to Europe. No Russian produce can get to England via the Baltic, as that outlet is bottled up by the German navy. Russian exports via the Dardanelles may be prevented by Turkey upon pressure from Austria-Germany. Shipments from Russia's Pacific ports via Panama are not likely to cut much figure.

The Belgian government has bought up the wheat stock there and will regulate the price; many city governments in Europe likewise.—American Agriculturist.

Cleanly Device in Killing.

In killing poultry a great deal of mess may be avoided and not only the feathers, but the premises, kept clean by means of the simple device shown with this paragraph. It consists of a tin receptacle about three inches in diameter and five inches deep, weighted at the bottom with about a pound of lead. At one side a stout wire hook is soldered.

THE BLOOD CATCHER.

The sharpened end of this hook is caught in the neck of the killed fowl, so that all the blood drops into the tin. The lead weight draws the fowl's body so that bleeding is perfect. This device is one of the most useful a poultryman can have. It costs about 40 cents if made by a tinsmith, but may be made at home for even less.—American Agriculturist.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

These are the days that are demonstrating the value of early spraying of fruit plants.

Clear up the greenhouse and get fresh soil in, ready for a new crop of plants next winter.

Stop cultivation in the orchard and seed to a cover crop. Late cultivation encourages late growth, which is objectionable.

This is the time of year when the well cared for garden is reducing the table expense greatly, besides giving a fine variety of food.

Early celery is about ready to blanch for market. Paper or boards are usually best to use, as they are not so likely to cause decay in warm weather as is dirt.

Many of the wild flowering plants are worthy of growing in the home yard. Some that have been especially good this year are the New Jersey tea, Indian puccoon, milkweed, wild sunflower and blazing star. Violets, bloodroot and other spring flowers are sometimes transplanted.—Le Roy Cady, Associate Horticulturist, University Farm, St. Paul.

Chickens as Wild Birds.

There is a chicken law in Indiana, according to State Attorney Jeffries, which claims that when chickens wander away from their owner's premises and take to tearing up the neighbor's garden they become wild birds, and the aforesaid neighbor may shoot them.

Laura Jean Libbey's Talks on Heart Topics

ROMANTIC, FOOLISH MOMENTS.

A little nonsense now and then is relished by the wisest men.

No matter how staid and sedate a man may be, he wouldn't be human if he didn't have a foolish, romantic streak somewhere in his heart. He inherited it from his parents, who looked and loved, else he would not have been here to make reality of his own day dreams.

The stern man may say all that he likes about the frivolity of women; that the woman is not yet born who could cause him one extravagant heart throb. With much bravado, he assures you that he is perfectly satisfied with his life. But when the spring comes on he begins to feel kind of lonely. Not but that there are plenty of women turning toward him with beguiling smiles, yet the time is not ripe for his heart to respond.

As the weather grows warmer and the long, sweet clover-scented evenings begin to work their influence, his icy nature undergoes a change. The woman whom he frowned at in her furs and costly wraps he now looks at from out of the side of his eyes. He thinks how much better she looks in her plain, inexpensive summer garb, and he would not be averse to an introduction.

He is agreeably surprised to see her on the porch of a hotel where he has gone to spend his two weeks' vacation. They come to know each other through mutual friends. He finds her bright, vivacious, jolly good company to pass the morning with on the piazza or strolling with a merry party. She is quite a different person, however, when they are out alone together for a moonlight walk.

Even a very plain woman looks her best under the silvery moon and gleam of the shining stars. Her voice drops to a musical, more tender key. The very touch of her finger, clinging lightly to his arm, is like a caress. Her presence is magnetic. The glance of her bright eyes is alluring. What wonder that the man strolling by her side forgets the vows he has made a hundred times to live and die a bachelor.

He succumbs to the witchery of the time, the place and the girl, and in a romantic moment professes her his heart and hand. No wonder it has been said that moonlight works madness in his brain. Most men can keep firm control over their hearts though the sun shines ever so brightly. Yet nine times out of ten, they have been known to yearn for love and to be loved, under the influence of the lover's moon. But what difference is it as to how it happened so long as they follow nature's plan and marry at last. Every man's heart is to be won, but it takes the right woman to touch the tender chord. Even she must wait until the psychological moment, that foolish, delicious moment when love overflows his heart.

The Way to Unlock.

The red-headed office boy was whistling a late popular air, but he didn't carry the tune very well.

"You will break into song occasionally, will you," remarked his employer.

"Sometimes," answered the auburn-haired youth.

"If you'd get the key you wouldn't need to break in," retorted the boss.—National Monthly.

Has to Stretch It.

When a man with a feeble reputation tries to extend it from the Atlantic to the Pacific, it grows awfully thin in spots.

British Wool Importations. Wool to the estimated value of $100,000,000 arrives annually in the port of London, about a third of which passes through the authorities' warehouses, while rubber of various qualities worth between $300,000 and $350,000 is placed on the show floors and in the sheds every three or four days and dealt with.

An Important Occasion

By JOHN TURNLEE

During the summer hegira of Americans to Europe Miss Virginia King met on the steamer outward bound David Redwood. He dined with her through galleries in Dresden and Munich, climbed mountains in Switzerland and parted with her in Paris, he being obliged to return to his native land early in September.

The result of this sightseeing was an engagement, and it was agreed that Mr. Redwood on his return to America should seek the acquaintance of the young lady's father and make a formal application for her hand. She was of course to write her father of the acceptance of her suitor, and as she was prone to decide things for herself the only part Mr. King was to take in the matter was to go through the formalities.

On Mr. Redwood's arrival he wrote Mr. King a note, stating that he had met his wife and daughter abroad and with their kind permission would be happy to call on Mr. King if he would inform him what time and place would be agreeable. The young man was invited to dine with his prospective father-in-law on the following evening at his suburban residence at East Arlington, a dozen miles from the city.

On the train Redwood sat next a gentleman who, when the conductor came along, offered a commutation ticket to East Arlington.

"Pardon me," said Redwood. "I see you are from East Arlington. Can you inform me what direction I shall take to reach the residence of Edward King?"

"Edward King? Oh, yes! I can tell you where he lives. I go right by his house. I'll show you the way with pleasure."

The gentleman-Barbour was his name—proved quite genial, and before their journey was ended Redwood had told him that he had met the Kings in Europe, and since King had told Mr. Barbour of his daughter's engagement the latter was not long in divining the young man's errand.

"Is Mr. King a—ahem—a genial man, a man of the world?" asked Redwood.

"On the contrary, he is very strict. Can't tolerate tobacco; never drinks any wines or liquors and is very tentative to formalities. But if you are going to see him on a matter of importance I would advise you to beware of him. He has a way of finding out about people by throwing them off their guard. They say that before employing a man in his business he will pretend to be a roisterer to him, and if there is anything wild about the fellow it will show itself."

"Thank you very much for the information," said Redwood, and turned the subject.

On the arrival of the train the gentleman showed Redwood to the King residence and went to his own home. The visitor was admitted by a butler and told that Mr. King was dressing for dinner and would be down presently. Then the butler disappeared and returned in a few minutes with a cocktail and a box of cigarettes on a salver.

"Thank you; you needn't leave that," said Redwood, looking at the liquor and the cigarettes longingly. "I neither drink nor smoke."

But the butler left the refreshments on a table and departed without a word.

Mr. King came down and received his visitor cordially. Naturally knowing the object of the call, he was a trifle disconcerted.

"I see you have not drunk your cocktail," he said. "Do so, and I will join you in another. Oscar, bring two cocktails."

Redwood protested that he never drank wines or liquors—they didn't agree with him—and, as for smoking, he regarded it a filthy habit. Mr. King looked at him with an expression of disapprobation. When the butler brought more refreshments he drank his cocktail, apparently much disgruntled at being obliged to drink alone. Then they went into dinner.

A bottle of champagne was on ice beside the host's chair, but Redwood declined to drink any of it. Of course Mr. King could not urge his guest to break through his accustomed habits.

During the dinner Redwood mustered the necessary courage to go through the formalities of asking Mr. King for his daughter, and the matter being over with the host regretted that his prospective son-in-law would not join him in a glass of wine to the health of their beloved Virginia. It was hard for the young man to resist the temptation, but, fearing he was being tested and might lose the girl he loved if he yielded, he stood firm.

During the awkward pause that followed there was a ring at the door-bell, and the gentleman Redwood had met on the train entered. Mr. King's expression changed.

"Hello, Jim!" he exclaimed. "You're just in time to prevent my drinking alone. Glad to see you. This is Mr. Redwood, to whom I have just given her."

With a twinkle in his eye, Mr. Barbour took up the glass that was filled for him and said:

"Pray excuse me, Mr. Redwood, for perpetrating a huge joke on you. The temptation was too strong for me. My friend Ned King is a temperate man but not such as I pictured him to you. I am glad to join you both on this very happy occasion."

And the three drank the health of the absent one with great gusto.

Safety First.

The reason we wouldn't hire a man who never makes mistakes is because he would soon have our job.—Galveston News.
